NEW RIVER CTC STUDENTS OBSERVE FALL BREAK, OFFICES OPEN MONDAY THROUGH WEDNESDAY

The fall break for students and faculty at New River Community and Technical College will be observed Nov. 24 through Nov. 28.

However, the offices on the four New River campuses will be open Monday through Wednesday of that week, and prospective students and their parents are invited to take advantage of the opportunity to visit the campuses and see the programs of study and courses offered.

In addition, the New River CTC Library, located on the Greenbrier Valley Campus, will be open Monday through Wednesday, Nov. 24-26, for use both by New River students and students home for the holidays from other colleges, as well as the general public.

“We have always been open to visiting students as well as encouraging our own students to take full advantage of the study and research time,” notes Bob Coston, New River librarian, who added, “The hours will be 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on the first three days of fall break. The public is always welcome at our library.” The library is located on the first floor of Greenbrier Hall, the main office and classroom building for New River GVC, and is the main research library in the Greenbrier Valley area.

Also open for New River student use during the first three days of fall break are the computer labs on the campuses.

New River CTC serves a nine county area of southern and central West Virginia from campuses in Beckley, 167 Dye Drive in the Harper Industrial Park; the Mercer County/Bluefield Campus, 219 Rock Street, Bluefield; the Greenbrier Valley Campus, 101 Church Street, Lewisburg; and the Nicholas County Campus, 6101 Webster Road, Summersville. Classes are also offered at the Public Higher Education Center in Beaver.
