DEADLINE EXTENDED FOR NEW RIVER WRITING WORKSHOPS

New River Community and Technical College has extended the registration deadline for creative writing workshops scheduled for June in Marlinton and Union.

In “Writing as An Act of Engagement,” instructor Tim Armentrout will lead students through writing exercises examining personal geographies (homes past and present, family, work, emotion), collaborative practice (interactive writing, writers in communication with each other and with their environments), influence and inspiration (what moves us to create) and other writers as examples. Overall, he will challenge the idea of the writer as a solitary figure.

The two-hour workshop will be offered in Marlinton at the Snowshoe Career Center on June 13, and in Union at the Monroe County Public Library on June 27. The hours are 1-3 p.m. The registration deadline for Marlinton has been extended to June 8, and the Union deadline is now June 22.

The cost for these sessions will be $25 per student and preregistration is required. For more information or to register, contact New River at (304) 645-6570 or (304) 793-6101.
